TWO-CENT RATE DEFEATED

State Supreme Court Handed Down Its Decision

AFFIRM LOWER COURT

Opinion Written by Chief Justice Mitchell Concurred in by Three Others

THE THREE DISSENTING OPINIONS

Philadelphia, January 20—The two-cent railroad rate law passed by the last legislature and now in force in this state, was today declared unconstitutional by the state supreme court. The case was taken to the supreme court on an appeal from the decision of Judges Wilson and Audenried, of the common pleas court. The higher court in a majority opinion, affirmed the finding of the lower court. Chief Justice Mitchell handed down the opinion today which was concurred in by Justices Fell, Brown and Elkin. Justices Mestrezat, Stewart and Potter filed dissenting opinions.

The law which went into effect last October passed both houses of the legislature by practically a unanimous vote, though the measure was fought by the railroad interests. The bill fixed two cents as the maximum rate per mile which railroads might charge for passenger service in the state. For every violation railroads are liable to a fine of $1,000. The Pennsylvania railroad shortly after the passage of the measure instituted suit in the common pleas to restrain the county of Philadelphia from enforcing the law, contending that the law was unconstitutional, unreasonable and confiscatory. This contention was sustained by the court.

The majority opinion in the case written by Chief Justice Mitchell declares that the real question at issue is whether the new rate law transgressed the provisions of the constitution that the legislative power to alter charters shall be exercised only in such manner that no injustice shall be done to the corporators.

The Pennsylvania railroad contended that, as applied to their company, the law could not be enforced because under their charter they were specifically granted the right to charge a rate of fare in excess of that provided by the new law and the act was unconstitutional, because the legislature could not pass a law nullifying an agreement which it entered into with the state when the railroad was organized.

With Justice Potter, Jutice Mestrezat holds that the company's revenues from all sources should have been included when considering the question of reasonableness of the rate.

It is not probable that any appeal will be taken from the decision. City Solicitor Gendell, who represented Philadelphia county at the hearing in the lower court, said of the supreme court decision:

"I do not see how the county can do anything further in the matter. The county has no right to appeal from the decision, although the railroad could have done so had the decision been adverse to it."

Attorney General Todd also declared that he could see no grounds on which an appeal could be taken.

Company B Inspection.

On Wednesday evening the inspection of Company B was held in the Armory. Quite a number of persons were there to watch the "boys in blue." After some preliminary drilling the inspection of arms was given. As usual this seemed to require a long time and was very tedious for those who looked on. Next came the roll call, to which fifty two responded. After roll call the soldier boys were drilled. This was what the crowd was looking for and they certainly saw some fine drilling. The boys showed to a good advantage that they knew just what was expected of them and that they could do it. If the boys should be called to fight the foe and they would do as well as they did last evening, the foe would get left. Company B. leads the brigade.

ONE FIRM WAS FOUND GUILTY

Interesting Testimony Given by Dr. Frear of State College.

One of the cases brought against several Altoona merchants by State Pure Food Agent H. L. Benzhoff, were tried Saturday before Alderman J. J. Irwin, before whom the prosecutions were entered.

The case taken up was that against Curry, Canan & Company, the well known wholesale grocers of the city, who were selling Grape-Nuts.

The defendants were represented by Thomas Hare, esq., and Hon. J. D. Hicks was counsel for the plaintiff. There was also present a representative of the Grape-Nut company, from Battle Creek, Mich., where the product is made.

The chief witness for the State was Dr. William Frear, head of the chemistry department at State College. Dr. Frear exhibited a sample of Grape-Nuts which had been analyzed and gave a very lengthy description of the ingredients of this breakfast food; their chemical action, etc. He stated that he had examined the food for the purpose of learning what amount of dextrous or grape sugar it contained, and said that the sugar is formed from the disintegration of starch, resulting from the effect of certain chemical action upon it. Many questions on the subject were asked by Attorney Hare and answered in a very complete and lucid manner by the witness. He stated that the food value of grape sugar is not nearly so great as butter and bread. When asked if there is barley etc., in Grape-Nuts the answer was that he could not tell, as the analysis was made to determine the presence of starch sugars. When questioned as to Grape-Nuts being the only food of the kind (not in the flake food class) the answer was in the affirmative.

The prosecution was not brought to show that Grape-Nuts contain any injurious ingredients, but to prove that the food is often misbranded, not possessing the real food value as asserted by the makers.

Dr. Horace Smith of Altoona, was called as a witness and testified that in his opinions Grape-Nuts is not a pre-digested food, as it cannot be such, unless acted upon by the action of saliva and gastric juices. Dr. Smith also said that there is more grape sugar in other natural products (as raisins for instance) than in Grape-Nuts.

The plaintiff company was found guilty and judgement entered against them for $60 and costs. The remaining cases brought against Fay, Hutchinson & Company, and several other merchants, will be heard on Friday and Saturday of next week.

JARED HAZEL.

His Death and Burial.

Jared Hazel one of Bellefonte's best known citizens died on Saturday afternoon in Williamsport. The day before Christmas the deceased went to Williamsport to visit his son Charles and was there only a short time until he took sick, but he recovered from this sickness only to be striken to his bed again a few days later. After a few days of awful suffering he passed from this life into the great beyond. His death was caused by bright's disease, from which he had been suffering for two years. He was about 65 years old and had lived in Bellefonte for a number of years, was born in Centre county and was a faithful member of the Lutheran church.

He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Jane Brown before marriage; by the following children, Thomas and George, of this town, Charles, of Williamsport; and Mrs. Ida Hart, of Williamsport; by the following brothers and sisters, J. A. Hazel, of Axe Mann; Wilson, of Madisonburg; Cornelius, of Pleasant Gap; Samuel, of Lemont; Franklin of this town; Mrs. Samuel White, of Bush Addition; and Mrs. Adam Courter, of Illinois.

The funeral services were held at the home of Mr. Thomas Hazel on Sunday evening, Rev. Barry officiating. Monday morning the remains were taken to Madisonburg for burial.

Picked up the Locomotive

On Sunday an immense crowd was gathered near the Griffith place to witness the lifting of the locomotive which was wrecked in Wednesday's terrible accident. Both the Sunbury and the Williamsport crews worked valiently the greater part of the day until at last the ponderous iron horse was set on the track and transferred to the Renovo shops with five other cars, to be repaired. From the battered appearance of the engine it seemed a very good idea to send it to the hospital.

APPEAL TO SUBSCRIBERS.

According to a ruling made by the post office department, weekly newspapers cannot be admited to the mails unless they are paid up to the current year.

In order that the Republican may be regularly sent to its subscribers, it is neccessary that all past due subscriptions be paid immediately. Before this ruling it was a matter of choice with the publishers of newspapers whether or not subscriptions had to be paid up to date, but now it is absolutely neccessary that all subscriptions are paid up to the current year, otherwise the postmasters will refuse to accept the papers as second class mail matter.

An appeal is made to all The Bellefonte Republican subscribers to pay their subscriptions to one year in advance. If this is not done the publication of the Republican will be greatly hampered.

As a rule the Republican subscribers are not in arrears more than one or two years, many, of course, always pay in advance, which will make it an easy matter to comply with the demands of the post-office department.

Remittances can be forwarded by mail in cash with entire safety. The date on your label will show at once the amount due.

Jan. 07 indicates that your paper is paid to January, 1907.

July 07 indicates that your paper is paid to July, 1907.

TYRONE HAS SMALL RIOT.

Flashing Knives Arouse Men who Yell "String up the Dago.'

Tyrone, Jan 18.—Joseph Welsh, employed as a brakeman at the Pennsylvania railroad scales, was stabbed by an Italian during a fracus arising from a drunken row here Friday after noon 4:30, the brawl nearly ending in a riot.

Welsh, with some friends, came out of the Central Hotel bar room and accosted a group of Italians, who were standing on the sidewalk. Harsh names brought forth blows and soon a general fight was in progress. The Americans and Italians battled until directly in front of Charles Deferie's fruit stand, when Rocco Famea, an Italian, drew a knife and stabbed Welsh in the right side, inflicting a wound about an inch and a half long and only missing a vital spot by a very narrow margin. A bystander pushed the Italian back, but he returned the second time to twice stab Welsh in the chest, the knife striking the breastbone each time.

Furious at his failure to kill his man the Italian then attempted to cut Welsh's throat, but his aim was bad and the knife struck just over the left eye and inflicted a wound which extended to the chin. This is the worst of Welsh's numerous cuts as it will disfigure him for life. Finding that a large crowd was collecting the Italian started to run for the depot with the knife in his hand, with Bert Bayard, editor of the Tyrone Daily Herald, in pursuit.

Famea, seeing that escape was impossible, threw the knife into the Juniata river and turned on Mr. Bayard who soon had the Italian mastered. "Joe" Brownlee then assisted Mr. Bayard to place the man under arrest. About 500 people had collected by this time and cries of "String up the dago" were heard, but the two men got their prisoner through the crowd and landed him safely in the hands of Officer Patterson, who placed him in the lockup. Several more Italians were arrested at the same time.

Welsh is the man who assaulted Officer Wands during the progress of a base ball game last summer, at the Athletic Park and has a scrappy disposition. He was taken to Dr. W. S. Musser's office, where his wounds were dressed, after which he was removed to the home of his sister, in the Seventh ward. None of the wounds are likely to prove serious. Famea will be given a hearing at 9 o'clock Saturday.

Masons to Meet at Williamsport.

Centre county Masons, at least a number of them, will attend the annual winter meeting at the Williamsport consistory. A. A. S. R., which meets in Howard Memorial cathedral Jan. 29 31. The gathering will be an important one, as a large class will receive the degrees, from the fourth to the thirty-second, inclusive.

On Wednesday, Jan. 29, the Lodge of Perfection will confer degrees from the fourth to the fourteenth; Thursday, the council, Princes of Jerusalem, will hold its semi-annual meeting, when the fifteenth to the twentieth will be conferred and on Friday the remainder will be conferred.

OUR BORO FATHERS

Hold Their Regular Semi-Monthly Session on Monday Evening.

The regular semi-monthly session of the borough council was held on Monday evening with President Keller in the chair and the following members present: Kirk, Shuey, Wagner, Beezer, Brown, Judge, Hastings, Fleming and Mott.

There was nothing of importance elicited from the reports of the committees.

The Street committee was instructed to repair the pavement in front of the Hibler property on Allegheny street by raising it up to the level of the Montgomery pavement.

The street committee was ordered to clean up the arc light on St. Paul street and put on a reflector. The street committee recommended an arc light for east Linn street near the Bower residence, but the council did not agree to putting a new light there at present. James Kelly's offer of $400.00 for the old Undine building was considered too low by the council. Their price was $500.00.

Newspaper Man Dead.

Orange S. Brown, owner and manager of the Gazette and Bulletin of Williamsport passed out of this life at 2.20 o'clock on Tuesday morning after long suffering. Death came at the Koser hospital on Market street, where Mr. Brown was taken on Tuesday, January 7th, having been confined to his apartments at the Updegraff for several weeks previous. Everything possible was done to prolong his life, but the best medical skill obtainable was of no avail and he gradually grew weaker day by day until the end, the inroads of the disease making rapid progress the last few days of his life.

Mr. Brown had been in ill health for several years. In fact, his close friends were aware for the past year that he was failing. At times he would be incapacitated from business for a period, having been long a sufferer from diabetes, but he had a powerful will and strong reserve force, and pulled through several serious sick spells in his later years, bravely continuing his work and directing the business of this newspaper, although far from being a robust and well man.

A HORRIBLE FREIGHT WRECK

On the L. & T. Division North of Axe Mann.

ENGINEER DROWNED

The Engine and Cars Were Piled up in Terrible Confusion on the Steep Embankment.

TWO CARS SMASHED TO SPLINTERS

Last Wednesday evening the citizens of this vicinity were stirred by accounts of a thrilling wreck, which occurred about two miles south sooth of town. At this point there are several curves, and a steep embankment running along the track on both sides, it was at one of the steepest parts of the embankment, on the right side, the engine and cars went over. The train must have been traveling very fast as it is stated that it ran along for more than 200 yards after leaving the track.

There is a small creek flows near the track at this place and the water was damned up by the wreckage, which as will be seen later, caused the death of the engineer. One of the cars containing meat and another containing California oranges were splintered badly, six cars left the track, five of which went over the embankment, this left five cars and the caboose on the track. The engine occupied a slanting position on the bank, resting on its side, at 7.40 Wednesday evening there was still fire in it. The track was very badly torn up and the trackmen commenced work on it at once.

The fireman and brakeman jumped on the left bank sustaining serious injuries. Wm. Winegardner, the brakeman, was taken to the hospital where his injuries received medical attention. Engineer E. Greeff and one brakeman stayed with the engine attempting to avoid the wreck. Their attempt, however, was unsuccessful and the great iron horse ploughed over the embankment with awful results. The engineer's one arm was pinned fast by the fire-box of the engine and all efforts to save his life were of no avail. There he was with the water slowing rising around his head until death came by drowning. Knowing all the time that he could not be helped, he breathed his last. The brakeman who assisted the engineer was found unconscious later, below the engine. He regained consciousness a short time after he was rescued and was not much the worse after his narrow escape from death.

This was the first run the engineer had made on this route and it seems he didn't understand the curves well enough. That is probably the main cause of the wreck. To make matters sadder the engineer was married and according to reports had three children. Imagine how they would feel upon hearing of the terrible accident.

The wreck train arrived on the scene about twenty-minutes of eight Wednesday night, and they commenced work at once. After about half an hour they had the engineer extricated. The body of the engineer was sent to his home in rapidly. Tuesday morning all was over Sunbury Tuesday forenoon. The work of clearing the wreckage from the track and of repairing the track progressed and the trains on that division ran as usual. Large crowds were present from the time the wreck occurred until about 8.30 o'clock. From this time on the crowd diminished until the final work was finished. This was the first wreck on that division for a good while. It was also one of the worst and saddest wrecks that ever occurred in this vicinity. The passengers on the L. & T. division Wednesday were transferred to the 4.44 which went to meet it.

LATER—It was announced that the accident was causen by an axle breaking on the third car from the engine which was heavily loaded with stone. This spread the tracks and derailed the train.

Tyrone vs Y. M. C. A.

There will be a good game of basket ball in the Y. M. C. A. gym., Friday night, when Tyrone Big Five will play "our boys." Tyrone has defeated some of the best teams in Central Penna., among which were Johnstown, State Scrubs, and last but not least the Bellefonte Academy. Tyrone has lost but three games out of ten this year, one of which was to our boys. Surely this game will be worth double the price admission 25 cents.

CRUSADE ON RUM.

P. R. R. Company Will Fight Saloons, Enginemen to be "White Ribboners."

It is said that the head officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad company are getting ready for a movement which will finally result in ridding the company of all its intemperate employes, not only those who get intoxicated once in a while, but also those who confine their drinking to an occasional glass, in the suspension and discharge of men preference will be given to teetotalers and the fact that a man drinks will weigh heavily against him, says the Greensburg Press.

It is also said that the superintendent of the Conemaugh division has started a plan by which he will obtain personal knowledge of the habits of every man on the job. Private detectives have been at work for a number of weeks for the purpose of spotting the men. It is their business to learn what they can in regard to membership in drinking clubs, the frequency with which they visit club rooms, saloons and speak-easies, whether they drink on or off duty and to what extent. Each detective carries a pocket kodak and he has instructions to "snap" employes whenever he sees them either taking a drink or entering places where intoxicants are sold. Those who are on the inside say that Superintendent Keller already has several large albums filled with racy pictures and that the gallery shows the faces of many well known employes whose attitudes are, to say the very least, quite suspicious.

That such a campaign is now under way is evidenced by the fact that a number of employes who have been quite active in the management, support and maintenance of certain clubs have been given their choice between allegiance to their club membership or losing their jobs. One well known enginemen was told to choose at once between the club and his engine, while others have been officially told that their membership in the clubs was not favorably regarded at the "front office."

Death of John Long.

At two o'clock Monday morning Death made his appearance on Reynolds avenue and with his keen-edged sickle laid low one of our oldest and best known citizens—a man who was loved and revered by all those with whom he came in contact. This man was no other than John Long a life long resident of this community. He was born on Feb. 15, 1824 thus making his age nearly 84 years. During his earthly career he attended the St. John's Catholic church, always taking an active part in its services. In his early life he married Miss Ellen Logan, who died eight years ago. But one child survivee him, William. Mr. Long took la grippe about New Year's and later this developed into a light attack of pneumonia, causing his death on Monday morning.

The funeral services were held on Wednesday at the St. John's Catholic church, the Rev. McArdle officiating. Interment will be made in Catholic cemetery.

Died of Typhoid Fever.

The many friends of James L. Gallagher are now bereaving his death which occurred in the hospital on Saturday morning at twenty minutes after eight. Deceased was born in Centre county, on August 22nd, 1882. He was raised in this community and early in life learned to be a core-maker at Lingle's foundry. He was in Altoona working at this trade when stricken with typhoid fever. This was about Christmas time and on Saturday morning he passed into a new life. He was a faithful member of St. John's Catholic church and made many friends everywhere he went.

Surviving him are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Gallagher, and his brother and sisters, Thomas and Mary Gallagher, Mrs. Elizabeth Derstine, and Mrs. Gertrude Smead of this town.

The funeral was held at St. John's Catholic church, Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. The Rev. McArdle officiating.

Refused to Tell Who Sold Him Liquor.

A boy eighteen years of age was found by the police Monday night in a drunken condition and taken to the city hall. Chief Evans endeavored to make the boy tell where he had secured the liquor which he had been drinking, but the young fellow refused to give any information. His father was notified and came to the city hall where he, too, tried to learn the name of the party who had sold the boy liquor, but the latter was obstinate and declared he would go to jail before he would reveal the name of the person who furnished the whisky. The father paid the fine and took his son home.

THREE GIRLS WERE KILLED

Ten Were Badly Injured In a Knitting Mill Fire

SCRANTON'S BIG BLAZE

Driven to the Fire Escape, They Were Afraid to Descend, and the Result was a Deadly Jam.

EIGHTY--FIVE GIRLS WERE AT WORK

Scranton, Pa., January 18.—Three girls were killed, ten seriously injured, and a score or more slightly hurt, at a fire in the Imperial Knitting Company's millin Dix court, in the central part of the city Friday morning.

Eighty-five girls were at work in the third floor when a fire broke out on the second floor where some men were varnishing in a ware house. It quickly ascended the elevator shaft, and drove the girls panic stricken to the one wind w opening on the fire escape. The fire escape is one of those in which the last reach of stairs is held in a horizontal position by a weight, and pulley dev ce. The girls first to reach this were afraid to descend it when they saw its far end moving downward. This caused a jam. The girls on the upper part of the fire escape were crowding those in front, and, all the time the flames and smoke were enveloping them. By the time the fire men arrived, half of them had jumped, some of them from the third floor. Men from the neighborhood soon arrived and held the swing portion on the ground, and the girls who had not jumped were being helped down when the firemen came and with their ladders rescued those who were jammed on the upper stretches of the fire escape. Many girls were saved by being caught as they jumped. One colored man who caught a girl who jumped from the third floor, was badly injured. He was helped away and his identity lost.

There was only one exit, a narrow hallway, besides the fire escape and this hallway was cut off by fire and smoke.

The whole interior of the building was eaten out by the flames, causing a loss of $75,000, most of which falls on the underwear company.

Some Thoughts on Grip

The prevalence of grip in many portions of the State at present makes it a State topic and many cures are passing around. If the attack is severe the best thing to do is to consult your physician at once. For a milder attack the Harrisburg Telegraph gives the suggestions from an old physician of that city: "The onion remedy is still popular and you would be surprised to know how much it is used. Boiled onions eaten and more boiled onions applied in the form of poultice to the throat or chest are apt to be official. Onions are a healthful food and are good as a tonic. Formalin or sulphur will not aid the grip patient. Whiskey and rum will retard a cure in most cases. Hot lemons have a negative effect. The old theory of red flannel bandages and red flannel stockings is perfectly absurd. If red flannel is good white flannel would also be good. There is absolutely nothing in red flannel treatment. Pepper tea might do harm to run down patients. There is only one cure for grip. That is to fight it off. Keep in the house and in bed. Eat nourishing food and avoid rich stuffs. Medicine will not aid much. Just forget about the grip and soon it will be found the grip has gone."

Two Men Disappear.

Somewhat of a sensation was created in the vicinity of Karshaus, Clearfield county, Tuesday by the strange disappearance of two woodsmen, Alex Myers and Jack Spangler by name. The two men built a raft out of railroad ties along Clearfield creek for the purpose, it is stated, to take a ride. The stream is considerably swollen on account of the recent rains and melting snow and the waters, are swift and turbulent at present time. The two men boarded the raft cut loose from the moorings and shouting a farewell to the other woodsmen in camp started on their perilous journey down the stream. Several hours later the wrecked raft was discovered a mile or more down the creek from where the men started and up to Wednesday night nothing could be learned of the whereabouts of the men. As they did not return to camp Tuesday night and the fact that no one in that neighborhood having seen them since starting on the trip gives color to the theory that both men were drowned when the raft was wrecked.

Church Federation in a Dream.

I dreamed a dream that I was with a score or more of preachers in a meeting for an interchange of views on church federation.

Concluding a few observations on the subject, I said, brethren you have a right to know to what denomination I belong. I am not ashamed to say that I am a Presbyterian. Both of my parents were Episcopalians. The first fifteen years of my life I entered no other church. If you want to see things orderly done, in a squarely all-round way, you can find them in the Episcopal church. The two or three Rectors present quickly expressed their responsive "Amen." This brought a zealous Methodist to his feet. He didn't say he was a Methodist, but he was. He offered a resolution that each one present should tell, in a word, what denomination he represented.

Evidently, he wanted a chance to express his experience as a Methodist and offset what I had said about the Episcopal.

His motion prevailed and he was quickly up again and said, "Brethren, thank God, I am a Methodist," and he sat down.

Very soon a young man in a back seat rose and, beginning a clear voice and winsome manner, said, Brethren, I have just returned from a two week's labors down in Hopedale Valley. Two hundred sinners were converted, giving their hearts to the Saviour, praise the Lord,' and he took his seat. This brought me to my feet again, I said that young man has made the best speech of all. So deeply interested in winning precious souls for the Redeemer's kingdom he lost sight of his and all other denominations except "the name that is above every name." Then in my dream I added, if we all had more of that young man's consecrated singleness of purpose in our work, the millennium soon would dawn even without the millennial dawn denomination recently started in Northern Pennsylvania. Then I awoke, and the dream so distinctly before me I could easily recall every part of it.

Proving Thaw Crazy.

Many witnesses, entirely new to the case testified at the trial of Harry K. Thaw on Wednesday and told stories of his eccentricities during the years immediately preceding the killing of Stanford White. They all declared he impressed them as being irrational.

The most interesting testimony was that of Christopher Duggan a steward of the New York Whist Club, who told of Thaw's doings the day of the tragedy and who under cross-examination by District Attorney Jerome gave amusing details of bridge whist games in which Thaw and several men of prominence participated.

Miss Matilda Stein, who was a telephone operator at the Grand Hotel in 1903 and 1904, when Thaw was a guest there, testified that she knew Thaw under the name of Farr. She saw him often, and his eyes were always staring and bulging. His manner was irrational. One morning Thaw put in 75 telephone calls in less than three hours. One morning he ordered his breakfast three times in twenty minutes.

On cross-examination Miss Stein said Evelyn Nesbit also was a guest at the Grand under the name of Miss Farr.

"Wasn't it the morning after she left that the 75 calls were put in ?" asked District Attorney Jerome.

The witness was sure it was not because Miss Nesbit had put in several that day herself. One, the witness remembered was to Burr McIntosh.

15 YEARS IN PENITENTIARY

Limit of Law for Men Who Waylaid Pretty Girl.

LAWYERS PLEAD IN VAIN

Judge McCarrell, in an Address to the Criminals, Declared that Womanhood Must be Protected.

BOTH THE DEFENDENTS ARE GERMAN

Joseph Fisher and Mike Gettering, the two Germans who were convicted of assaulting pretty Goldie Meyers, of Enhaut, December 28, were Thursday morning given the maximum sentence for that crime, fifteen years in the Eastern Penitentiary at solitary confinement and hard labor and to pay fines of $100 each and costs of prosecution.

John C. Nissley, who represented Fisher, and John R. Geyer, on behalf of Mike Gettering, pleaded for leniency on behalf of their clients, stating that Mrs. Fisher and the two children, the oldest of whom is but 14 years of age, would be thrown on the county if he were sent to prison. Both attorneys said their clients bore good reputations heretofore and Mr. Nissley said it was because Fisher was out of work that he was in that locality that day, assisting a friend to lay water pipes.

In sentencing the men, Judge McCarrell asked:

"Can you suggest any circumstances which might have provoked the commission of this crime, Mr. Nissley?"

Mr. Nissley said he could not, and Judge McCarrell continued, addressing the prisoners:

"Womanhood must be protected in this community and we must see to it that the law is enforced. You have been charged with one of the highest crimes known to law. The offense was committed under aggravating circumstances.

"We would not be human if we did not take into consideration the family which stands before us today, but we must enforce the law and give to womanhood the protection of the law.

"The sentence of the Court is that you pay the costs of prosecution, pay a fine of $100 for the use of the county of Dauphin, and be confined in the Eastern Penitentiary at Philadelphia for a period of fifteen years."

Lives of Several Hundred People Endangered

New York, Jan. 17.—The lives of several hundred men, women and children were endangered Thursday by an explosion in the works of the National Conduit company at Hastings, which set fire to the enormous plant.

The main building occupied more than two acres and as the blaze spread rapidly the firemen were powerless. The loss at the end of the first hour was estimated to be over $300,000. The departments from neighboring towns aided in the fight against the flames.

When the explosion occurred hundreds of the employees made a frantic rush for the exits and in the excitement it seemed that great loss of life was inevitable. Coolness on the part of some of the men resulted in all getting to the streets in safety.

Elegant Costumes to be Seen Here Soon.

The picturesque Highland Scottish costume is the climax in costuming effects in "Roney's Boy's" concerts, who are to appear in Bellefonte Jan. 27th. Each of the five boys wears the tartan of a different Scottish clan. One wears the Gordon tartan, another wears the Victoria plaid, another the historic old McLachlan, another the Wallace tartan and another the Hunting Stuart.

Besides these, the little vocalists wear the cotta and cassock for their sacred songs, fancy dress Mexican costumes with the sugar loaf hats, cadet uniforms immaculate sailor suits of white duck. The costumes are usually in keeping with the songs. They add immeasurably to the interest of the program, and every number springs a surprise of some kind.

The local association in order to secure this company booked them early last spring and without doubt it will be the best entertainment of the season.

HAULING MANURE.

Some Reasons Advanced For Postponing the Work.

There is no best time to haul manure that will apply in all cases. The matter depends upon conditions. In one case it might be well to haul and spread directly on the field as fast as the manure is made, and in another case such a proceeding might involve considerable loss. It is good judgment in this as in other things that counts in the end, remarks a writer in Orange Judd Farmer.

Hauling manure directly from the stable to the field in winter is economical of labor, inasmuch as it may be done with sleighs when there is not much other work to do, but it is not economical of manure if the manure of the land it is hauled on to is such that the fertilizing elements of the manure will be largely lost by leaching and running away. Such conditions would be met on hilly ground, where the water would run into the hollows and carry the fertilizing elements with it or in waterways where spring freshets run.

More or Less Loss.

There is more or less loss on all fields from this cause since the ground is usually sufficiently frozen when the spring thaw comes to cause more or less water to run away before the ground thaws sufficiently to allow of its soaking in. The question to decide, then, is as to whether the loss from leaching in the field will be greater than what would be encountered in the pile.

Formerly I preferred to haul directly to the fields in winter, but with the perfection of the litter carrier and the manure spreader I am better satisfied with the results of dumping the manure under cover and hauling it out in the spring.

I do not favor the plan of hauling manure on grass or clover, especially the latter, in the fall or winter. If hauled in the fall, it has a tendency to smother the plants, and if hauled in winter the manure draws the sun, and the melted snow runs down and freezes, forming a coating of ice on the ground that I have found to be against the welfare of the plants.

It is true that under certain conditions the snow will stay on the ground longer in the spring if covered with manure than it will if not, but it will also melt off more during the warm days in winter. Moreover, I think it very questionable whether it is desirable to have the snow lie on grass late in the spring. I prefer to have my grass and clover get as early a start in the spring as is possible.

HANDY DEVICE.

A Simple Contrivance That Is Easily Made and Used.

A hog ringing device is here pictured in regard to which a writer in Farm Press says:

In making this crate I use 2 by 4 timber for all cross and upright pieces except the board at the back to fasten the hogs in, the stanchion and the crosspiece in front, which should be wider to hold the pins, and I find inch lumber sufficient for this piece. The floor also is inch stuff, and the upright stanchion is made of 2 by 6 stuff, with bolts at the bottom and two other bolts to use as pins at the top. The crate is four feet long, fourteen inches wide at the bottom and twenty-four inches wide at the top. I place it in the hogpen door, let the hogs in from the rear and let them out from the front after the rings are adjusted.

Hibernation of Boll Weevils.

It has been often noticed that in a wooded country boll weevils appear first in spring along the borders of fields next to the woods and gradually work inward from the edges, so that it seems probable that in a wooded country most of them hibernate in woodland. Around outbuildings and barns also are found favorable places, as there are always more or less rubbish and protection in such situations. In 1903 more than five times as many weevils were found in a piece of cotton near the Texas State college barn, where cotton had been grown the previous year, than were found in any other locality in that neighborhood. It is also noticeable that weevils are always more numerous near gins than at a distance from them. Unfortunately where much rubbish and grass are present and where the soil remains loose and is not packed by rains large numbers of the weevils winter in the cotton fields.

Breeding Dairy Cows.

In breeding dairy cows a man should have a definite object in view. Too many shift from beef to dairy when dairy products are high and beef products are low and then shift back again from dairy to beef when beef rises in value. By this method a man is constantly shifting from one breed to another, and as a result he is getting a herd that is good for neither milk nor beef. A man must have an ideal toward which he is breeding and then bend all his energies to that end. This shifting from one breed to another is a suicidal policy that will ruin any man and any herd.—Kansas Experiment Station.

You Will Be Glad.

When the years have come and gone, you will be glad as your memory runs backover the path that you stopped to speak to every friend you met, and left them all with a warmer feeling in their hearts because you did so.

And you will be glad that you were happy when doing the small, every-day things of life, and you served the best you could in earth's lowly round.

You will be glad that men have said all along your way: "I know I can trust him, he is as true as steel."

You will be glad that there have been some rainy days in your life. Clouds and storms are not the worst things in life. If there were no storms the foundations would dry up, the sky would be filled with poisonous vapors, and life would cease.

You will be glad if you shut your ears tight against all the evil things men said about one another, and tried the best you could to stop their poisoned words.

You will be glad you have met all the hard things which have come to you with a hearty handshake, never dodging one of them, but turning them all to the best possible advantage.

Witnesses Tell of Thaw's Act.

New York, Jan 18.—Belle Morehouse Lawrence, who as governess in the Thaw family was so impressed with Harry's apparent mental weakness as a youth that she kept a diary of his peculiar acts, will arrive from California to testify in his behalf.

Prof. Beck of Pittsburg, who attended Thaw also gave evidence as to his weakness. Thursday morning's session opened with August Weber still on the stand reciting Thaw's irrational acts. He said Harry was extremely nervous and irrational. When the family was living at Washington, he said Harry got him out of bed one night to serve scotch to his friends. He said Thaw gave him $5 for it. He acted queer and did the most unexpected and queer things.

Albert R. Beck, a Lancaster county, Pa., school teacher, said he had Thaw in charge from Sept. 1881, until April 1882. He said he was excessively nervous, moody and abstracted. He said he would often burst into animal like howls which he could not control. He said his eyes would roll downward with a wild expression and frighten the entire class. He said he showed extreme obstinacy toward his parents.

Two Flemington Boys Nearly Drowned

Two Flemington boys had a narrow escape from drowning in the canal near the boat houses in that place at about 4.30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, and but for John Maggs, the barber, both would have met death in a watery grave.

Five boys, after the afternoon session of school, went to the canal to skate, but the ice was in such a soft condition that all were precipitated into the water.

Three of them were near the shore where the water is shallow and had but little trouble to get out, but a boy named Barner, aged 12 years, and another named Bilby, aged about 7, fell into deep water, the latter lad having gone to the assistance of Barner, who was drowning. Both then floundered in the icy waters, and would have gone down to death had the cries of the other boys not attracted the attention of Mr. Maggs, who hurried to the spot and brought the drowning lads to shore.

The recent rains and mild weather had the effect of making the ice very soft and it is decidedly unsafe at the present time.

No Liquor by Mail.

Postmaster General Meyer has issued an order which has a direct bearing upon the prohibition movement. The order is as follows:

"It is hereby ordered that it shall be a condition of any contract hereafter entered into for carrying the mails upon star, screen wagon, mail messenger or special service route that the contractor or carrier shall not transport intoxicating liquor from one point to another upon such route while in the performance of mail service."

The order becomes effective at once in many sections of the country where it is necessary to install new and supplementary service.

Settlement In Full.

By LULU JOHNSTON.

Copyrighted, 1907, by N. E. Daley.

Dick Staley, perched on a furniture crate, looked disconsolately at Billy Blaine, who was regarding the wall paper and trying hard not to laugh. In spite of Blaine's efforts the twitching corners of his mouth curved, and as he met Staley's eye he exploded in a roar of laughter which served only to deepen Staley's gloom.

"Laugh, confound you!" growled Staley. "It's funny to you. It's not so funny to me. I've got to get this place settled in five days, and upon my soul I don't know what to do first!"

"The first step is easy," chuckled Blaine. "Get a man in to scrape the walls. The paper is the worst I ever saw."

"It looked all right in the book," said Staley defensively. "It was the prettiest thing in the whole book of samples."

"It may be all right in a sample," admitted Blaine, with another glance at the flowered monstrosity, "but there is only one square yard of the sample. It looks different, Dick, when you have a roomful of it."

"I know it," admitted Staley, "but that doesn't help matters. It only serves to make them worse. I wanted to surprise the matter by bringing her to her own home instead of taking her to a hotel. She hates to give up her old home, and I wanted to make the change as easy as possible."

The smile died from Blaine's face at the allusion to Mrs. Staley. He was Dick's chum, and he knew how tenderly Dick loved the gentle faced woman who within the month had lost both husband and daughter. Now she was coming to live with Dick, and for weeks he had planned to take an apartment that she might not feel too keenly the loss of the home that had been hers since marriage.

"I'll tell you what we'll do, Dick," suggested Blaine. "Let's go downtown for some lunch. I'll phone Nell for one of those professional fixers for you. She knows a crackerjack, a girl who used to move in good society and whose father lost his money. She knows what's what and how to do it, and Nell will get her to do it for you."

Dick patted his chum on the back while his eyes glistened. Nell Blaine was the most accomplished matron of his acquaintance. She would extricate him from his trouble. Together they left the apartment, and while Staley ordered lunch Billy Blaine hung over the telephone in the restaurant.

"COMPLETE?" SHE ASKED, NOT QUITE CATCHING HIS MEANING.

"She'll bring her over tonight at 8," reported Billy as he took his seat. "Eat with a good appetite and consider yourself settled already."

Billy's words restored confidence, and when Dick Staley met Marion Wadleigh that evening his last doubt vanished. The girl did not laugh at his blunders nor even at the wall paper. She listened with sympathy and took from her chatelaine the tablets on which to make notes of what she wanted. With increasing admiration Staley followed her through the various rooms, noting the quick, businesslike way in which she condoned his errors and approved his successes.

"I can do it over in four days," she said briskly when she had shut up her memorandum book and returned to the parlor where Nell Blaine, Billy's sister-in-law, still sat in rapt admiration of the garish wall paper. "Suppose, Mr. Staley, that you drop in here Friday afternoon? Then you can suggest any last changes you wish made, and the place will be ready for your mother Saturday evening. Shall I get you a servant also?"

"Can you?" Staley had heard of the servant problem, and he had worried greatly. This businesslike girl offered even to take that trouble off his hands. He was rapidly coming to regard Marion Wadleigh as a tailor made angel.

He dropped in the next morning on his way to the office and found a paper hanging crew already installed, removing the paper that had proved so disappointing. Marion was there in a gingham apron even more becoming than the cloth costume of the night before, and Dick's heart beat faster in answer to her greeting.

There was something "homey" in her appearance that appealed strongly to the man who for years had enjoyed but an occasional glimpse of home in vacation time. The soft dark hair was hidden by a cap and the piquant face was flushed with exertion, but the heightened color only added to her beauty, and the cap did not shadow the tender light in the brown eyes.

Dick went to his office with his head in a whirl. Ever since he had come to the city he had sunk himself in work. Fortune had come his way rapidly, and up to the present he had found work all sufficient. Now he began to realize that the years had been lonely.

Marion was not at the house when he dropped in the following morning, nor did he see her again until Friday afternoon, when he went to make his final inspection of her work.

Dick gasped as he entered the apartment. In place of the gaudy paper the walls were now covered with quiet tones and the flowered carpets had been exchanged for rugs whose soft tints harmonized with the new paper. Instead of the solid officelike furniture were lighter and more tasteful pieces, and the whole apartment suggested a feminine presence.

Best of all, Marion Wadleigh was there. The print dress had been exchanged for an afternoon costume, and immediately Dick decided that after all a print dress was not the most becoming costume which Marion could wear, though that had been his impression since he had seen her last.

Quietly she moved about the place, giving an account of her expenditures, and Dick followed, hearing only the rich voice, full tones, without caring what she said. At last the tour of the rooms was ended, and she returned to the parlor.

"If you like," she said, "I can buy the material for dinner tomorrow and be here to welcome Mrs. Staley when she arrives. Mrs. Blaine wanted to come over, but she had to leave town last night with her husband."

"I should be delighted if you could arrange to be here tomorrow," said Staley. "I am sure that my mother will wish to add her thanks to mine for the beautiful home you have provided. You will stay to dinner?"

"I only suggested being here to welcome her," said Marion, her face flushed. "You see—in business—it is best to maintain strictly business relations. You don't have to thank me for what I have done. My charges cover all services, you know."

"But money could not pay for pulling me out of a hole and settling me," insisted Dick. "Besides, I don't want to maintain a purely business relationship unless you insist, Miss Wadleigh."

"I don't insist," the girl answered softly. "I have been much interested in your devotion to your mother, and I am sure that I shall be glad to know her better. She must be a dear old lady to deserve such affection."

"I want you to know her very well," explained Dick. "You see you have only partly settled mother. You have provided her with a home, but I want a home of my own, and I want you to furnish it complete."

"Complete?" she asked, not quite catching his meaning.

"Even to a wife," explained Dick. "I don't ask an answer now, but will you consider the proposition?"

"As a business woman I have always considered propositions," she said, with a laugh, but the look in her eyes belied the briskness of her words, and Dick realized that when they should know each other better there was a prospect of being settled "in full," as he termed it some months later when he placed a solitaire on Marion's finger.

He Got the Job.

He called at the house and asked if she had any carpets to beat, adding that he had been in the business for over twenty years.

"How much to beat that parlor carpet?" she asked.

"Four shillings."

"Why, that's awful! There was a man here yesterday who offered to do the job for 2 shillings."

"Exactly, madam, but how was he prepared?"

"He had a stick in his hand."

"I presume so. He intended to take the carpet out on a vacant piece of land, didn't he?"

"Yes; our yard is too small, you know."

"Exactly. That is a tapestry brussels carpet. It is badly worn. He would make a great show in getting it out and in here. Out on the piece of land he would give your name to every one who asked who the carpet belonged to. Is that the way to do a job of this sort?

"I take the carpet out through the back yard. I wheel it home. I beat it in a yard surrounded by a high board fence, and while I am returning it, all nicely rolled up and covered with a cloth, if any one asks me what I have I reply that it is a velvet carpet for 224 Blank street. If no one asks any questions I call at the houses on either side of you and ask if they have just ordered a new wilton. They watch me and see me come in here."

He was given the job.—Pearson's.

A Poet's Vision.

For years the poet Francis Thompson had been one of the "submerged," selling matches, calling cabs, anything to obtain the pence necessary to buy food. At last he yielded to despair, and having for some days saved up all he could earn, he devoted it to the purchase of a single dose of laudanum sufficient to end his troubles. With this he retired at night to his haunt, the rubbish plot in Covent Garden market. Then by his own narrative the following incident occurred: He had already taken half the fatal draft when he felt a hand upon his arm and, looking up, saw one whom he recognized as Chatterton forbidding him to drink the rest, and at the same instant memory came to him of how, after that poet's suicide, a letter had been delivered at his lodgings which, if he had waited another day, would have brought him the relief needed.

It happened so with Thompson, for after infinite pains the editor of a magazine who had accepted and printed an essay and a poem of his, but could not discover his address, had that very morning traced Thompson to the chemist's shop where the drug was sold, and relief for him was close at hand.—London Academy.

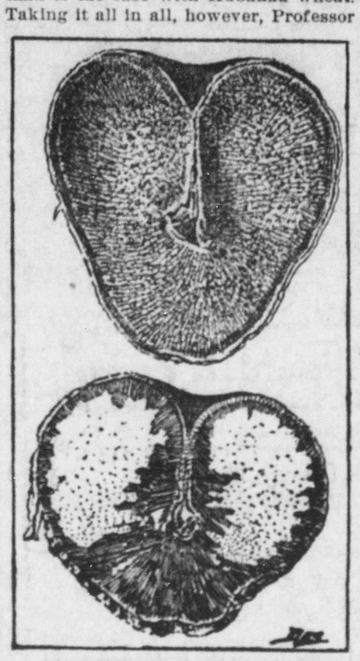
DURUM WHEAT.

Comparison of This Variety With Our Common Grain.

Professor Shepard of South Dakota has recently issued a report on durum wheat, in which it is shown that Kubanka contains less bran than Red Fife, that more flour is made from Kubanka and that the flour contains a larger amount of the proteid of the wheat than does flour made from northern spring wheat. Baking tests, however, show that spring wheat makes a larger loaf and contains a larger amount of gliadin in the gluten than is the case with Kubanka wheat. Taking it all in all, however, Professor



CROSS SECTION OF WHEAT GRAINS.
[1. Flinty grain grown under dry land farming; 2. Half starchy grain.]

Shepard states that "for the yield, hardiness, flour yield, protein distribution and the quality of both bread and macaroni durum wheat, especially Kubanka, is to be recommended for general use."

Several years ago Clifford Richardson of the bureau of chemistry published the results of several hundred analyses of wheat grown in the various states of the Union, from which it appears that the average protein content of our American spring and winter wheat (Triticum vulgare) is 12.2 per cent, whereas the average proteid content of considerably over 100 samples of durum analyzed by the writer is 14.7, or 2.5 per cent more than that of the common wheat.

Durum wheat grown in Algeria contains only from 8 to 10 per cent of water. Common wheat grown in countries adapted thereto contains from 10 to 16 per cent of water, according to the moisture of the atmosphere. The difference in the water content was sufficient to make the French officials investigate the advisability of buying wheat from dry land regions, which wheats would contain less moisture, and thus not only a large saving would be made in the cost of transportation, but more wheat per bushel would be actually obtained.

The cuts here shown represent cross sections of wheat grown under varying conditions. Fig. 1 represents a durum grown on land not irrigated, being flinty, hard and translucent and containing over 18 per cent of protein. No. 2 is an intermediate grain, showing both the starchy and the flinty characteristics. No. 3 represents a grain from the same kind of seed as that which produced No. 1 and grown on adjacent land, but under excessive irrigation, the result being a soft, mealy, dull looking grain somewhat shorter than No. 1 and containing 12 per cent of protein. It has lost its durum characteristics entirely and is no more suitable for making good macaroni than are our soft wheats.

STARCHY SAMPLE.
[Grown under excessive irrigation.]

Sample No. 1 has the dark amber color of the flinty grain. No. 2 is an intermediate grain and No. 3 the light, starchy grain.

An Ideal Climate.

The state of Oregon is in the same latitude as South Dakota and the New England states, but the Japan current equalizes the temperature and gives Oregon an ideal climate. All kinds of forage crops are grown without irrigation except in a very small area in southeastern Oregon.

Tuberculosis In Pigs.

In view of the increasing anxiety about tuberculosis in pigs, every precaution should be taken to know definitely that all milk and other animal products fed to pigs are free from tuberculosis.

The Spirit of Winter.

The Spirit of Winter is with us, making its presence known in many different ways—sometimes by cheery sunshine and glistening snows, and sometimes by driving winds and blinding storms. To many people it seems to take a delight in making bad things worse, for rheumatism twists harder, twinges sharper, catarrh becomes more annoying, and the many symptoms of scrofula are developed and aggravated. There is not much poetry in this, but there is truth, and it is a wonder that more people don't get rid of these ailments. The medicine that cures them—Hood's Sarsaparilla—is easily obtained and there is abundant proof that its cures are radical and permanent.

All the Gold IN GEORGIA Could not Buy-

Roding, Ga. August 27, 1906.
Messrs. E. C. DeWitt & Co.,
Chicago, Ills.

Gentlemen:—
In 1897 I had a disease of the stomach and bowels. Some physicians told me it was Dyspepsia, some Consumption of the Lungs, others said consumption of the Bowels. One physician said I would not live until Spring, and for four long years I existed on a little boiled milk, soda biscuits, doctors' prescriptions and Dyspepsia remedies that flooded the market. I could not digest anything I ate, and in the Spring 1902 I picked up one of your Almanacs as a poor emaciated Dyspepsia wreck will grasp at anything, and that Almanac happened to be my life saver. I bought a fifty cent bottle of KODOL DYSPEPSIA CURE and the benefit I received from that bottle ALL THE GOLD IN GEORGIA COULD NOT BUY. I kept on taking it and in two months I went back to my work, as a machinist, and in three months I was well and hearty. I still use a little occasionally as I find it a fine blood purifier and a good tonic.

May you live long and prosper.
Yours very truly,
C. N. CORNELL.

THE WOMAN WHO COUGHED.

Catarrh had nearly ruined me. It had eaten away the partition in my nose; produced Asthma, Bronchitis, Rheumatism; ruined my stomach; in fact, gone all through my system. Then Grip finished me. I was a wreck; took cold at nothing; and coughed day and night. The doctors dosed me with opium and quinine. No good. Cough "cures"? Bah! Then Brazilian Balm renovated me. Killed every germ. Took 10 $1.00 bottles. Now I'm like a girl of 16.

MOTHER BELIEVES IN PERUNA.

Mrs. K. Kane, of Chicago, Uses Pe-ru-na in her family of five children, Grace, Myrtle, Edward, Reeves and George.

A HEALTHY FAMILY

Kept the Children Well.

Mrs. K. Kane, 196 Sebor St., Flat 1, Chicago, Ill., writes:

"Peruna has been used so long in our family that I do not know how I could get along without it.

"I have given it to all of my five children at different times when they suffered with croup, colds and the many ailments that children are subject to, and am pleased to say that it has kept them in splendid health.

"I have also used it for a catarrhal difficulty of long standing, and it cured me in a short time, so I have every reason to praise Peruna."

Catarrh of Stomach.

Mr. John M. Stansberry, Amarillo, Tex., writes:

"For several years I had catarrh of the stomach. I was hardly able to do anything, and could not eat with any satisfaction.

"When I commenced using Peruna, I weighed only 110 pounds. I took six bottles, commencing in the spring, and by the following winter I had gained 63 pounds.

"I owe it all to Peruna. It cannot be praised too highly.

"I am forty-five years old, and my occupation is that of architect and builder."

Pe-ru-na in the Home.

After all, experience is the best teacher. Some doctors may write in favor of Peruna. Other doctors may write against it. But it is the testimony of the mothers and fathers who are rearing families, who love their children, who must economize as to doctor bills, who are raising little boys and girls into men and women of the future, it is the testimony of such people that really counts.

There is no way to positively ascertain how many families in the United States rely upon Peruna for the many climatic ailments to which the family is subject. The number must be a great one. Several millions perhaps. They have learned how to use Peruna for ordinary ailments, and in that way are guarding their homes against more serious diseases.

Such ailments as coughs and colds, sore throat and catarrh, croup and colic, indigestion and loss of appetite, anemia and nervousness, all these ailments are promptly relieved by a few doses of Peruna at the right time.

Millions of provident mothers and fathers are guarding the interests of the home by using Dr. Hartman's great remedy, and profiting by his medical booklets and personal advice.

Catarrhal Croup.

Few people realize how frequently croup is caused by catarrhal congestion of the throat. Probably nine cases out of ten of croup is of the catarrhal variety.

The medical profession recognizes three forms of croup. The spasmodic variety, membranous croup and catarrhal croup.

Nearly every case is of the catarrhal variety, and a few doses of Peruna taken at the first appearance of the catarrhal symptoms is generally sufficient to avert the attack of croup altogether.

Croup is a frightful disease. No disease of children so alarms the household. It is impossible to estimate how many homes have been protected against croup by the proper use of Peruna.

Household Remedies.

There is no remedy in the world which has proven so popular for catarrh as Peruna. It has been used for more than thirty years and cured thousands of cases, as proven by our testimonials.

In the early history of this country every family had its home-made medicines. Herb teas, bitters, laxatives and tonics were to be found in almost every house, compounded by the housewife, sometimes assisted by the apothecary or the family doctor.

Furnishing medical compounds direct to the people, through the druggists, is simply the extension of the practice begun by the people themselves.

Nervous System a Wreck.

John G. Hirdler, Garfield, Kas., writes:

"On December 2, 1899, I was injured by a fall on the Santa Fe R. R., and my entire nervous system was impaired by the same. The help of a physician was useless. I believe I tried every one in the vicinity, but all were alike and I remained without strength.

"I then tried Peruna, and after using it for three months was totally well. I am seventy-one years old, and my work on the railroad is hard and tedious, but I can work like a young man in all kinds of weather, heat, cold, rain, snow or storm alike.

"Peruna is the purest and best medicine, and if used according to directions, it will help any person and cure any disease for which it is recommended. I recommend this medicine by my own experience to any one suffering from an ailment on the order of mine."

For Herself and Children.

Mrs. Aline DePasse, 776 E. 165th St., New York, N. Y., writes:

"It gives me pleasure to testify to the curative qualities of Peruna and Manalin.

"I was afflicted for over seven years with catarrh of the head, throat and digestive organs. I consulted many physicians, but they did me no good.

"One day I happened to read some testimonials in your Peruna almanac. I decided to try Peruna and Manalin. I bought a bottle of each and after taking them for a week, I noticed a change for the better. So I kept it up and after using twelve bottles I was perfectly cured.

"I also gave the medicine to my children and they had the same beneficial result. I would never be without these remedies in the house.

"I highly recommend Peruna and Manalin to all my friends, and, in fact, to everybody."

Thousands of families have learned to trust and believe in Dr. Hartman's judgment, and to rely on his remedy, Peruna.

WASH DAY IN A CHATEAU.

Mme. Waddington's Account of This Tremendous Event.

It was unfortunate perhaps that we had arrived during the "lessive." That is always a most important function in France, writes Mme. Waddington in Scribner's. In almost all the big houses in the country—small ones, too—that is the way they do their washing. Once a month or once every three months, according to the size of the establishment, the whole washing of the household is done. All the linen—master's, servants', guests', house—is turned out, the linen closets cleaned and aired. Every one looks busy and energetic. It is quite a long affair, lasts three or four days. I often went to see the performance when we made our "lessive" at the chateau every month.

It always interested our English and American friends, as the washing is never done in that way in either of their countries. It was very convenient at our place, as we had plenty of room. The "lavoir" stood at the top of the steps leading into the kitchen gardens. There was a large, square tank sunk in the ground so that the women could kneel to their work, then a little higher another of beautiful clear water, all under cover. Just across the path there was a small house with a blazing wood fire, in the middle an enormous tub where all the linen was passed through wood ashes.

There were four "lessiveuses" (washerwomen), sturdy peasant women with very short skirts, sabots and turbans (made of blue and white checked calico) on their heads, their strong red arms bared above the elbow. The Mere Michon, the eldest of the four, directed everything and kept them well at work, allowing very little talking. They generally chatter when they are washing and very often quarrel. When they are washing at the public "lavoir" in the village, one hears their shrill voices from a great distance. Our "lingere," Mme. Hubert, superintended the whole operation. She was very keen about it and remonstrated vigorously when they slapped the linen too hard sometimes with the little flat sticks like spades they use. The linen all came out beautifully white and smooth, hadn't the yellow look that all city washed clothes have.

A GREAT BEAUTIFIER.

Laugh and Give Your Nerves a Holiday.

There is no doubt that laughter is a great beautifier, and so, too, is relaxation," says a New Zealand exchange. "Indeed it is marvelous how some women manage to perform their various duties at all without ever giving their nerves a holiday by relaxing them. As they go on day after day the worried minds seem to twist the nerves until they are tense and strained, like the spring of a clock that is kept tightly wound up. The tension shows in the face, which grows sharp and thin; in the voice, which becomes querulous and bad tempered, and in the manners, which become hurried, abrupt and disconcerting. Women who have allowed themselves to sink into such a condition usually complain that they have no time to rest. As a matter of fact, they have lost the power of resting and simply must be doing something. They seem to be afflicted with the disease of perpetual motion, and if they could only realize it are rapidly wasting their nervous strength and preparing for a physical breakdown. This is plain speaking, but only plain speaking will make some women stop their suicidal folly and take themselves well in hand. They may think that they have no time to rest, but the housework, the cooking, washing, cleaning, ironing, mending, must be done day by day or else their world will come to an end. But there is no housework under the sun that cannot be rearranged in such a way that a weary and worn woman may lie down twenty minutes and rest at some time during the day. And if she cannot see her way to rearranging her work then she must let some of it go. There are no two questions about it. We cannot juggle with our health, we women. Either the work must go or we must. And there is no work of ours that another woman cannot step in and do quite as well—perhaps better. This sounds hard, but it is true. So when we find that our passion for doing things is sapping strength of body and elasticity of mind, let us stop and consider whether it is, after all, worth sacrificing health, happiness and good looks for—a bed or a padded cell in a hospital.

Quilt From Extra Cuffs.

Women whose husbands do not wear the extra cuffs which come with almost every shirt can make good use of them by cutting off at buttonhole edge and also at length, then pulling them apart, and you will have two colored or figured pieces and one plain white piece (sometimes two) from the inside of the cuff. By sewing these pieces together and using a little judgment you will have a pretty and durable quilt, as almost all shirts wash well. It does not take long to save enough, as you have six and sometimes eight pieces from a pair of cuffs.

Sincerity Gives Power.

There is nothing which will add so much to one's power as the consciousness of being absolutely sincere, genuine. If your life is a perpetual lie, if you are conscious that you are not what you pretend to be, you cannot be strong. There is a restraint, a perpetual fighting against the truth going on within you, a struggle which saps your energy and warps your conduct, says Home Chat. Sham and shoddy are powerless; only the genuine and the true are worth while.

Dodging Thirteen.

"When I lived in New York," writes a former New Yorker from Berlin, "there was a house near Central park which should have borne the number 13, but because of the superstition of the occupant permission was secured to place the number 11a or 15a over the door. I spoke of the circumstance a few days ago and learned that the thirteen superstition was more clearly marked here. In the instance mentioned by me an individual was concerned. Here it was the most important corporation in Wiesbaden. There is no No. 13 bathroom in any of the bathhouses, no No. 13 room in any hotel and no No. 13 place at any table d'hote. At Langenschwalbach the baths, under government control, also have bath cells No. 12a where they should be numbered 13."—New York Tribune.

A Worthy Antagonist.

"Did you visit any of the old caves when you were up in Scotland?" Jorkins was asked by a friend.

"Yes," replied Jorkins reminiscently, "and, by gum, we had to forcibly pull Maria out of one cave."

"Good gracious! She was fascinated by its beauty, I suppose."

"No, it wasn't beauty. You see, there is a wonderful echo in the cave, and Maria couldn't bear to think of the echo having the last word."—Liverpool Mercury.

His Eminence.

A French cardinal, being small of stature and hunchbacked at that, always gave the keenest repartee when addressed with "highness" and "eminence." "My highness is five feet two inches, and the eminence I carry on my back."

Seemed Incomprehensible.

Mrs. Somer—What delicately constructed things these big steamships are! Mr. Somer—Why do you say that? Mrs. Somer—Just think of the breaking of a screw disabling the whole ship.—Philadelphia North American.

Poor Jones!

Missionary—Can you give me any information about Deacon Jones, who labored among your people three years ago? Cannibal—Well, the last I heard about him he had gone into consumption.—Judge.

HER DRESSING TABLE.

Sandalwood Novelty Rivals the Classic Silver.

Powder boxes and jewel cases are shown in silver, and here again the oriental touch is all pervasive. One Japanese box is of hammered silver with a minute floral design worked out with that infinite precision that marks the best pieces wrought in old Nippon. The decoration is so perfect that examination under a magnifying glass only makes one more impressed with its beauty. This box is sold at $35. Burmese boxes with figures from the Indian mythology are quaint and beautiful in oxidized silver. The prices run from $20 to $35.

Chinese jewel cases are the latest word in their line. To detail the designs as they should be were impossible to an occidental pen, but the cases themselves give out a breath from the land of mystery. The prices range from $50 to $125.

A striking hand mirror is shown in oxidized silver with the Japanese dragon in very bold relief. The figure covers the whole of the back and handle and is brought out to a height of half an inch. While silver will always hold its place among the furnishings of the dressing table, the present fashion in toilet articles runs to ivory and expensive woods, and it is worth noticing that nearly all of the latest designs are in oriental carving. The Japanese predominates, but there is also much in Indian, Chinese and, latest of all, Burmese. Sandalwood backs are the novelty in brushes, and, while they are comparatively sober after the brightness of gold, silver and ivory, the beautiful brown wood, with its fleeting perfume, has a charm all its own. They are carved in Chinese and Japanese floral and figure designs and range from $5 upward for odd pieces. No full sets have been shown as yet.

In every affair consider what precedes and what follows and then undertake it.—Epictetus.

Forgetful.

"I suppose," said the beautiful girl, "that you often burn the midnight oil?"

"No," replied the poet. "I hang my hat on the doorknob, so the landlady can't look through the keyhole and catch me burning the gas."—Judge.

Inquisitive.

"I'll send my boy to a boarding school."

"What for?"

"Oh, he asks such questions. He wanted to know last night if a shoemaker could breathe his last."

Board of Agriculture.

Old age as it comes in the orderly process of Nature is a beautiful and majestic thing. The very shadow of eclipse which threatens it, makes it the more prized. It stands for experience, knowledge, wisdom and counsel. That is old age as it should be. But old age as it so often is means nothing but a second childhood of mind and body. What makes the difference? Very largely the care of the stomach. In youth and the full strength of manhood it doesn't seem to matter how we treat the stomach. We abuse it, overwork it, injure it. We don't suffer from it much. But when age comes the stomach is worn out. It can't prepare and distribute the needed nourishment to the body, and the body, unnourished, falls into senile decay. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a wonderful medicine for old people whose stomachs are "weak" and whose digestions are "poor." Its invigorating effects are felt by mind as well as body. It takes the sting from old age, and makes old people strong.

Death of Henry Guyer.

Henry Guyer, of Fowler, died in the Bellefonte hospital at five o'clock Wednesday morning of pneumonia. A day or two before Thanksgiving he had his hand badly mangled in a corn shredder and on Thanksgiving day he was brought to the hospital for treatment. He had a cold at the time which later developed into a bad attack of pneumonia. Every attention was given him and as late as Tuesday it was thought that his recovery was sure but Tuesday night he had a sinking spell, owing to his heart weakening, and he died early Wednesday morning.

Deceased was born in the neighborhood of Huntingdon Furnace and was about forty-eight years of age. For a number of years he has been farming the Fowler farm at Fowler. He is survived by his wife and a number of children. The remains were taken from the hospital to his home at Fowler on Wednesday and the funeral was held Saturday.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

His Enormous Hands and Feet and His Wonderful Strength.

In a memoir written by David Akerson in 1811 is found this description: Washington had a large, thick nose, and it was very red that day, giving me the impression that he was not so moderate in the use of liquors as he was supposed to be. I found afterward that this was a peculiarity. His nose was apt to turn scarlet in a cold wind. He was standing near a small campfire, evidently lost in thought, and making no effort to keep warm. He seemed six feet and a half in height, was as erect as an Indian and did not for a moment relax from a military attitude that seemed a vital part of the man.

Washington's exact height was six feet two inches in his boots. He was then a little lame from striking his knee against a tree. His eye was so gray that it looked almost white, and he had a troubled look on his colorless face. He had a piece of woolen tied around his throat and was quite hoarse. Perhaps the throat troubles from which he finally died had its origin about then.

Washington's boots were enormous. They were No. 11. His hands were larger in proportion, and he could not buy a glove to fit him and had to have his gloves made to order. His mouth was his strong feature, the lips being always tightly compressed. That day they were compressed so tightly as to be almost painful to look at.

At that time he weighed 200 pounds, and there was no surplus flesh about him. He was tremendously muscled, and the fame of his great strength was everywhere. His large tent, when wrapped up with the poles, was so heavy that it required two men to place it in the camp wagon. Washington would lift it with one hand and throw it in the wagon as easily as if it were a pair of saddlebags. He could hold a musket in one hand and shoot with precision as easily as other men did with a pistol. His lungs were weak, his voice never strong.

He was at that time in the prime of life. His hair was a chestnut brown, his cheeks were prominent, and his head was not large in contrast to every other part of his body, which seemed large and bony at all points. His finger joints and wrists were so large as to be genuine curiosities. As to his habits at that period I found out much that might be interesting. He was an enormous eater, but was content with bread and meat if he had plenty of it. It was his regular custom to take a drink of rum or whisky on awakening in the morning.

Of course all this was changed when he grew old. I saw him at Alexandria a year before he died. His hair was very gray, and his form was slightly bent. His chest was very thin.

"In Dead Earnest."

This is an expression commonly used in the case of any one who is alive, wide awake and very actively engaged in some important undertaking. In this sense, there is just now a case of "dead earnestness" in our town.

Regardless of partisan politics or church connection, all of our preachers and many leading laymen are planning a temperance campaign that no opposing influence can successfully counteract.

At a preliminary meeting Monday the legal medical and clerical professions and the different political parties represented, a movement was started that will make itself felt in the legislature at Harrisburg as never before.

No power on earth can stay its progress or retard the oncoming tide.

More to follow.

Death of Mrs. Kammerer.

Catherine, the wife of Charles Kammerer, died at her home in Lock Haven at 5 o'clock Friday morning, of a complication of diseases, aged about 78 years.

Mrs. Kammerer was born in Prussia and emigrated to this country early in life: She resided in Lock Haven since 1855 and was one of that city's oldest inhabitants. For the past six years she has been in an almost helpless condition and to add to her infirmities in her declining years she became totally blind about five years ago.

Deceased is survived by her husband, one daughter, Mrs. Minnie Smith, of DuBois; Frederick of near this town; Chas. J. of Lock Haven and George W., a merchant and city clerk of Pittsfield, Ill.

A PEANUT SPREE.

Suggestions For a Merry Evening With the Toothsome Nuts.

From six to ten is the best number to play this game. A leader is chosen who arranges the order of events and takes down the records with pencil and paper. Prizes may be given to the winner in each stunt or to the one who at the end of the game has the greatest number of successes to his credit.

Two or three quarts of peanuts are spread on a table in the middle of the room.

A dish of any kind is filled with the nuts, and each player guesses how many it contains.

See who can hold the greatest number in one hand without the assistance of the other in placing them there.

A peanut is suspended by a thread about a yard long, and on the floor is placed a vase with mouth just large enough to receive the nut. Each player in turn holds the string so that the peanut dangles a foot or more above the vase and tries to drop it in.

Each person is given five peanuts, and at a signal all begin to shell them. He who finishes first is the winner. The inner skins must be removed and no nut broken. If one gets broken, another may be taken in its place.

Five nuts are placed on a chair at one end of the room. Each player in turn must take them, one by one, and put them on a chair at the opposite end of the room, returning them in like manner. The one doing it most quickly is the winner.

A large pin is stuck upright in the floor, and each player in turn pitches five peanuts at it, one by one. He who makes a nut remain nearest the pin wins.

Each shells five peanuts, and the one who catches the greatest number of these in his mouth after tossing them in the air wins.

A player is chosen by lot to stand at one end of the room with mouth wide open, while each of the others tries to toss three peanuts into it, one at a time.

How They Fooled the Preacher.

When our grandmothers arranged to have chicken for Sunday dinner—for the preacher—they picked out the biggest and fattest and toughest old hen on the place Saturday afternoon and had the boys and dogs "run her down." A tough old hen that is chased all over the place and frightened out of her life is as tender as a spring lamb when cooked. Fright makes any animal, bird or fowl tender, so the books say, and it appears from this that our grandmothers knew what they were about when they had the tough old hens chased before killing.—El Dorado (Kan.) Penns Cave Development.

The recent purchase of the famous and historical Penns Cave near Centre Hall by the Messrs. Campbell, will mark a new era of prosperity for that resort. The natural wonders of the cave will be further enhanced by the installation of an electric light plant on the property and when the myraid of lights are turned on the marvelous wonders of the cavern will be brought out in all their bold and striking out-lines. The cumbersome dory will be displaced by electric launches; the dry cave will be cleaned and dried; a passage way will be cut through from the cave to the dam outside and many other improvements will be made that will add to the comfort and convenience of visitors.

Among the improvements contemplated by the Campbells in the erection of a sanitarium on the Penns Cave farm. Dr. Campbell, who is connected with the University of Pennsylvania, is interested in all medical work, and if it seems a paying venture to erect a sanitarium at Penns Cave, the project will in all probability be carried out in the future. The value of such an institution to the citizens of Penns Valley and of the county generally cannot be reckoned in dollars and cents, and if the project is carried out the sanitarium will be one of the most modern and thoroughly equipped in the state.

ORCHARD FERTILIZATION.

Three Elements Required by the Soil For Best Results.

There is an idea more or less common among fruit growers that if they are growing and removing no crops from the space between the trees no plant food is being removed from their orchard soils. And they reason therefore that it is not necessary to apply any fertilizing elements to the orchards. It is true that the soils in the Bitter Root valley are rich in all the elements required in the growth of plants, but it is only a question of time when the yields will decrease, and then the farmers and orchardists will find that they have been drawing on the plant food in the soil until it is practically exhausted.

It is a common saying that old apple trees produce only small apples, while the younger trees produce large apples. The reason for this is usually attributed alone to the age of the trees and not to the fact that the trees have been for years drawing upon the plant food, while nothing has been added to the soil.

Professor C. G. Hopkins of the Illinois experiment station says in regard to the fertility of the soil: "The productive capacity of practically all soils in good physical condition is measured by the available supply of the three elements, nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium. These are the elements which are present in nearly all soils in comparatively small amounts and yet are absolutely required by all agricultural plants and in very considerable quantities."

Practically all grain farmers now realize that it is unprofitable to attempt to grow several successive crops on the same soil without adding fertilizers. In the west where the soils have not yet been totally deprived of all food elements barnyard manure, clover or peas and other legumes are usually sufficient to keep the soil in good productive condition, and these manures are now applied at the proper time by all progressive grain farmers.

Many fruit growers apparently reason that it is not necessary to fertilize soils upon which fruit trees are growing.

It is conceded by all progressive farmers that in order to maintain the soil fertility and get maximum crops of grain from a given field it is necessary to put back in the soil a part at least of the food elements removed by the crop. Since an apple crop removes more plant food per acre than the grain crops, it seems only reasonable that more plant food should be returned to the soil.

As to varieties in the Bitter Root valley, from ninety-three growers who have produced apples for market 45 per cent have made the most profit from McIntosh and Alexander. In concluding the foregoing, by R. W. Fisher of the Montana experiment station, it may be said that the McIntosh red apple is classed as one of the late fall or early winter varieties, and within the last few years it has attained great popularity in New England. The fruit is juicy and tender, the skin bright crimson on light yellow with a heavy bloom.

Root Crops For Stock.

Root crops are a valuable feed for stock, especially during the winter, when they supplement the rations of grain and other dry feed stuffs. They thrive best in regions having moist and cool weather, but nevertheless enough heat and sunshine to promote rapid growth during the growing season. In many sections of the northern states root crops may be grown with profit, but the fact that their culture is not so generally understood as it should be is probably the reason that they are not grown so extensively in the United States as in Canada and parts of Europe.

Warm Water For Cows.

A practical farmer says that his cows produce more milk when provided with warm water during cold weather, the principal cause in shrinkage of milk being that ice cold water interferes with the digestion of food, whereas warm water promotes it.

THE FARM HORSE.

Errors In Care During the Season of Light Work.

With a great many farmers the winter season is one of comparative rest for the farm horse. Of course there are farmers who make it a point of keeping the team busy all winter, but even with these the work is not what it is in the other seasons. During the cold weather there is generally more or less teaming, such as hauling wood, ice, etc., but the work is not regular. Then in grain and hay growing sections there is considerable team work to be done in getting this produce to market, and there is other work for which a team is required, but with all this the horse is not called on to do anything like what he has to in spring and summer.

Winter Feeding.

But while the work for the average farm horse is not nearly as hard in winter as in other seasons, a time of comparative idleness is by no means the most agreeable to him or the best for his health. On the contrary, he is exposed to various ills from which he does not suffer during the season of hard but regular work. One of these ills is irregular and careless feeding. During the spring and summer, when the horse is working hard, he is regularly fed a certain amount of grain and a reasonable quantity of hay. In winter the grain ration is cut down and the hay is increased. Some farmers make the mistake of feeding a great quantity of coarse fodder through the winter to the detriment of the animal's health. Others stuff their horses with hay until they are entirely out of condition for any kind of use. Probably in nine cases out of ten the heaves are brought on by the injurious method of feeding horses in winter.

Watering the Work Horse.

Another mistake is the manner in which the work horse is supplied with water. Often the water is offered the horse when he wants to eat rather than drink, and because he refuses no more is given him until the next regular time for watering. By this time he has become very thirsty and drinks too much, says a writer in Country Gentleman. And in freezing cold weather how many warm or take the chill off the water before giving it to the horse?

POULTRY PENS.

Satisfactory Ventilation Secured by Duck Covered Openings.

In giving a description of a New York poultry house, which contains a number of pens, G. Arthur Bell writes of the system of ventilation in use as follows: Several of the partitions in the house are boarded up solidly from floor to ceiling to prevent the drafts which are so likely to be found in long houses.

In the front or south side of each pen are placed two windows, each window consisting of two twelve light sashes. The windows are arranged to slide up and down as in an ordinary dwelling, special care being exercised to have them move freely in order that they may be opened at any time regardless of weather conditions. Unless this point is considered the windows are very apt to become frozen in on the arrival of cold weather, and it becomes difficult to open them; hence the ventilation is frequently neglected. During the past winter one window in each pen was arranged as shown in the cut, the upper sash being dropped to the window sill and the opening thus made covered with a piece of eight ounce duck, the latter being tacked to the upper bar of the lower sash and to the sides and top of the window frame. In extreme cold weather the lower sash is slipped up to the top of the window, thus effectually closing it. This method proved to be very satisfactory, the house being unusually dry and the birds appearing to be in excellent health.

Cutting Back Trees.

In highly interesting experiments at the Woburn (England) experimental fruit farm in cutting back apple trees when planted the ultimate result was found to be that trees not cut back until the end of the first year continued to form wood in subsequent years, and the crop borne by them during the first ten years was only one-third of that borne by those which were cut back when planted.

Winter Hay.

There should be no difficulty anywhere in the south in getting a winter hay crop that would yield one ton per acre, to be followed by a summer crop of cowpeas that would yield from one to two tons per acre. Considering the price of hay in the south and the considerable income from a hay farm, the cost of the necessary equipment is not too large.—Harman Benton.

Cotton as a Surplus Crop.

High priced cotton does not help the all cotton farmer, for the price of everything else rises at the same time. The man who raises cotton as a surplus crop makes net money when cotton goes to good prices.—Texas Farm and Ranch.

CURE FOR RED EYELIDS.

Hot Water and Antiseptic Cleansing Fluids Do the Work.

Only the simplest kind of treatment is necessary to reduce swollen or inflamed eyelids. Hot water, antiseptic cleansing fluids and simple astringents are the things required in this cure.

Many times inflammation comes from eye strain, and in such cases an oculist should be consulted. A low condition of the system, however, is frequently responsible for red and heavy lids, and while treating them externally it is well to take a tonic internally and do what one can to improve the general health.

When granulation is present make a paste to relieve the lids by rubbing a bit of alum into the raw white of an egg until the latter forms a curd. At night put this over the lids and place some on a linen bandage, which should be worn on the eyelids throughout the night. The paste should be made fresh each time.

While vaseline is most beneficial if applied to the edges of the lids every night, it is a balm rather than a medicine, for it has no stimulating or curing qualities.

Rinsing the eyes with a 5 per cent boracic acid solution is helpful. This should be done night and morning. To give this bath put the liquid into an eye glass in which it is possible to immerse the lids by opening and shutting them. This process clears the eye of any impurities or foreign matter and is one of the most harmless and best known applications for the eyes.

After this bath healing remedies should be put on. Oculists differ greatly as to the efficacy of cold or hot fomentations when there is inflammation. One scatters the trouble; the other brings it to a head. The application of a warm, but not hot, compress is undoubtedly soothing, and should the lids be inflamed from the effect of strong light, such as sun or snow or high wind, it will be found well to bathe them gently, really mopping, with warm water. Afterward they should be wiped with a solution of witch hazel and water, half and half. If you can then stay in a darkened room for fifteen minutes the inflammation will probably disappear.

Should stys recur frequently the services of an oculist should be sought.

BROWN BUTTER SAUCE.

Several Recipes For Serving With the Fish Course.

Place the desired amount of butter in a saucepan and heat until it becomes a rich brown color. Take care, however, that it does not burn. Add a little vinegar or lemon juice and pour over the fish or joint with which it is to be served. Another brown sauce is made by putting in a saucepan two tablespoonfuls of butter and two tablespoonfuls of flour. Cook until the flour is brown, stirring all the time. Then pour in one cup and a half of boiling water, simmering and stirring until smooth and thickened.

A still richer brown sauce is made in this way: Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a pan over the fire. Then add one sliced onion, one small carrot, one-half of a turnip chopped fine, a bay leaf and sprig of parsley. Cover and simmer fifteen minutes. Then place over the fire, where the vegetables will color without burning. Add two tablespoonfuls of flour, stirring until the flour is well browned.

Add gradually two cups of stock, half a dozen peppercorns, three cloves and a blade of mace, with salt to season. Cover and simmer twenty minutes and serve. This sauce may serve as the foundation for the bordelaise sauce or may be varied by adding wine, lemon juice or mushrooms, thus making many different sauces with the same foundation.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

If a few drops of glycerin be added to the starch for linens it will be found that the iron will not stick and that the linens will have a beautiful gloss after they are ironed.

Use a clean brick to stand the iron on when ironing instead of the usual ironing stand. It has no holes underneath to admit the air, and the irons will retain their heat much longer.

New boots often do not take a good polish. They will do so if they are rubbed over with a cut lemon before they are blacked. A cut raw potato may be used instead of the lemon if the latter is not to be had.

To make paper stick to metal use a strong solution of washing soda. While hot dip the metal in and when clean take it out and rub with a soft cloth. Apply onion juice to the metal, press the paper smoothly over it, and it will adhere like glue, and it will be almost impossible to separate the two.

Threw Bottles Into his Yard.

Early Saturday morning the front yard at the residence of Congressman E. F. Acheson, of Washington, Pa., who is leading the local option fight in Washington county, resembled the stock room of a bottle factory. Dozens of empty beer bottles lay scattered over the lawn.

Mr. Acheson's temperance views are well known, and the scattering of the bottles was either the work of a practical joker or of persons whose enmity has been aroused because of the strong stand Mr. Acheson has taken on the liquor question.

PLOT TO BLOW UP FLEET

Brazilian Police Discover Conspiracy of Foreign Anarchists

SHIPS NOT IN DANGER

Sao Paulo Officers on Trail of the Arch Conspirator and His Arrest is Momentarily Expected.

WERE WARNED IN GOOD TIME

Rio Janeiro, Jan. 19.—The Brazilian police have discovered an anarchistic plot here, having as its object the destruction of part of the American fleet now lying in the harbor. The conspiracy, while centering in Rio Janeiro and Petropolis, has ramifications in Sao Paulo and Minas Geraes.

John Fedher, who resided in Petropolis, was the chief conspirator, although foreign anarchists are involved in the plot. Fedher is known to the police, and officers have been sent to Petropolis to apprehend him. A detective well acquainted with Fedher, having served on the police force at Petropolis for some time, returned from that place today, after having made investigations, and had a long conference with the chief of police at Rio Janeiro.

The latter gave it to be understood later that the Sao Paulo police are on the track of the arch-conspirator and expect to arrest him.

In an official note, which the chief of police sent to the correspondent of the Associated Press, he says:

"Some time before the arrival of the American fleet at Rio Janeiro the Brazilian government received from Washington and Paris advices that anarchists of different nationalities intended to damage one or several of the ships of the American fleet.

The chief of police authorized the statement that the plot was organized by Fedher, and he added that the people of the United States could rest easy, as all of the conspirators had taken refuge in the interior.

The police of Sao Paulo have sent word that they are on the track of the malefactors, who, they declare, will not be able to come to Rio Janeiro.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Dorothy's Dime.

By CARL WILLIAMS.

Copyrighted, 1907, by M. M. Cunningham.

Grayce looked grim as he threw open the door and stumbled over the roll of rugs that lay just within.

"Another night has come, and that landlord still lives his evil life," he called, and from the dimly lighted parlor came an answering sniff.

Bert Grayce hung up his coat on the half shrouded hatrack and entered the room. The furniture was swathed in burlap and excelsior, and the piano was covered with old blankets and other soft wrappings, and trunks and boxes were piled with some attempt at order along the bare walls and upon the equally bare floor.

On top of the upturned soap box a group of candles guttered dismally, their feeble rays serving to accentuate the absence of gas. Desolation—the desolation of an exodus—brooded everywhere, even upon the face of the woman who sat in a low rocker beside the candles and vainly made pretense of reading.

Hers was a lovable face, framed in masses of silver hair, and Grayce's smile softened and grew more tender as he bent to kiss the still smooth forehead.

THE LONG, SLENDER HAND WAS CLASPED IN BERT'S OWN.

"Cheer up, mother mine," he said laughingly. "All is not yet lost, though the painters remain on strike. Tomorrow the new home will be painted. By Saturday we shall be comfortably settled."

"Are you sure?" demanded Mrs. Grayce wistfully. "If you are, we will not have the gas turned on again."

"There are electric lights in the new home," he reminded. "You will forget these nights of Egyptian darkness, and the next time we move we shall not order the current turned off until we are safely out of the house."

"To think that at the last moment, with all packed and ready to move, this strike should have come up!" said Mrs. Grayce, with a groan. "Are you positive, Bert, that the painter you have engaged will not be won over by the strikers?"

"Never more certain of anything in my life," was the laughing response. "The painter is no less a person than your accomplished son. I stopped in and ordered the paint sent over this morning. Tomorrow I shall go and wield the brush, so you must wake and call me early. I must put in a full day."

Bert passed on to his own room, lighting his way with matches, and his mother heaved a sigh of relief. For eight days they had virtually camped in the apartment they had given up, waiting for their new quarters to be finished. The packers had done their work, the man had come to cut off the gas and the moving vans were backed up to the door when a telephone message came to the effect that, owing to a strike of the painters, the new rooms were not yet ready for occupancy. From day to day the landlord had promised that something would be done at once, but now a full week had passed, and hope had commenced to fail until Bert decided to do the work himself.

He made an early start, and 8 o'clock found him in a suit of jeans applying the paint with as skillful a brush as though painting were his regular occupation. He worked rapidly and well and the rooms had begun to assume a habitable aspect when he heard the hall door open and close and looked up, expecting to see the landlord.

Instead he faced about to encounter the gaze of a pair of brown eyes which seemed to pierce his paint stained jacket and give him an oddly queer sensation about the heart. The possessor of the eyes was a fragile slip of a girl whose pure oval face was oddly like a picture by some old master. The slender form was wholly concealed by a brown holland pinafore, and this was splashed with color. A dab of blue which had sought a higher resting place made a saucy beauty patch against the dimpling chin.

"So you have come," she said at length. "I was beginning to think that you would be out on strike all winter. I was promised that my floors should be shellacked first."

"Yes, but"— began Bert.

"I want no answers," said the girl, with a stamp of her tiny foot. "I am to have an exhibition day after tomorrow, and the floors must be done by then, do you hear?"

"Yes, ma'am," said Bert meekly.

"Then pick up your pail and brush and come along," was the quiet command. "If I had not smelled the paint in the hall you would have spent the day here, when I need you so much more. Come on, please."

She turned to lead the way as though there was no argument to be made, and Bert, grinning over the ridiculousness of the affair, followed after. He saw with pleasure that the other apartment was only across the hall from his own. It was a much smaller place, and it did not take Bert long to paint the floors. The girl stood in the doorway superintending the work, and Bert was sorry when at last he rose from his knees and announced the completion of the job.

"You will still have time to finish the other apartment," said the girl severely. "Next time do as you are told, and you will have less trouble. You know very well that the agent told you to do this apartment first. He promised me that he would."

"He'll promise anything," began Bert grimly, but the tiny foot stamped a warning. The girl did not care to argue the point with a workman, and she dismissed him with a nod.

"Come in tomorrow and give it a second coat," she commanded. "Wait a moment," she added as Bert turned to go. "Buy yourself a good cigar," she finished as she handed him a coin.

Bert dropped the dime in his pocket with a murmured word of thanks and backed out of the door. Once on the other side, his embarrassment died down, and he paused long enough to ascertain from the card on the door that it was Dorothy Remsen who occupied the apartment. That she was a china decorator he already knew, and vaguely he remembered having heard of her skill.

He was tired when he sought his home that night, but the thought that he would see the girl again on the morrow gave him a feeling that the day had been well spent. He carefully slipped the dime in a locket which he wore on his watch fob and smiled as he thought of his "tip."

He painted the studio floors the first thing next morning and then turned his attention to his own apartment. It was late in the afternoon when he had finished and was cleaning up. There came a ring at the door, and he opened it to confront a young woman who radiated confusion and penitence.

"I have come to apologize," she said, blushing redly. "I stopped in to thank the agent for sending me a painter, and he did not know that my floors had been done. Then he recalled that you were painting your own place and explained my error."

"It's a very natural one," he said, with a laugh. "If you were half as desperate as my mother, I should not blame you for kidnaping me with a full knowledge of the facts. I am only glad that I have been of service to you."

"You don't know how greatly you have aided me," she cried. "I can never repay your kindness. I am so sorry that I was abrupt yesterday. Will you pardon me?"

The long, slender hand was clasped in Bert's own, and he smiled down into the brown eyes that dropped shyly before his gaze.

Dorothy slipped back into her own apartment, and Bert, closing his door, drew the dime she had given him from his locket.

"The job's going to cost you more than that, little woman," he said as he smiled to himself. "It's going to cost you your heart and hand, and they are worth millions of dimes."

As It Happens.

They parted as girls; they met as women.

"And what of all your sweethearts?" asked the old time chum at length.

"Gone the way of all good things," answered the captivator.

"That tall, lanky blond with the fierce mustache, for instance?"

"Went insane!"

"Gracious! And Jimmie Bowles—'the little muskrat,' as you used to call him—who was so devoted?"

"Killed in an auto accident trying to save my life."

"Dear me! And your needy artist swain, who found in you the only customer for his wonderful paintings?"

"Became a waiter and married an heiress!"

"And the kinky haired little French count?"

"Ran away with my maid!"

"Worse and worse! And how about Reggie? You did profess to love him, you know."

"Now my brother-in-law!"

"Never! Well, that Mr. Hardflint, who used to snub us all, yourself included? I hope he met his deserved finish."

"He did. Come up to the house and I'll introduce you to him. He's my husband!"—Young's Magazine.

How the Other Half Gives.

"That sentiments of tender charity are innate among the poor can be seen from a case which presented itself among a group of little children at a school where we visited," writes Mrs. John Van Vorst in Woman's Home Companion. "They were of the most destitute, this little class, but as regular as soldiers in attendance. After an unusual absence of two days one of the small pupils, Mary by name, was closely questioned by the teacher on her return. Very reluctantly she responded that they had been without food at home and that she was ashamed to come hungry to school.

"No comment was made before the other children. Nothing further was said.

"The following morning a small procession filed before the teacher's desk—a procession of little people, tiny, poor, ignorant. Yet not one of them came empty handed. One brought an apple, one a piece of cheese, one a roll; one a slice of meat. And each as she put her meager offering down whispered to the teacher, 'It's for Mary.'"

Suited His Temper.

"You seem to find that book very interesting," said Mrs. Henpeck.

"Yes," replied Henry; "it's delightful. I've glanced at the ending, and the hero and heroine don't get married after all."—Washington Herald.

Whether a knave or a fool can do the greater harm is one of the questions which twenty centuries of experience has not fully determined.—Dallas News.

Old Feather Beds.

Make a thin cotton batting pad—or use an old one if you have it—the size of the feather bed to be used. Lay the pad on a quilt frame, or the dining table will do. Lay the feather bed on the pad and smooth or level the feathers all out so that they will be divided evenly, then fasten the edges of the pad and bed together with pins. Get a long needle and some strong cord—common wrapping cord will do—and tie as you would a comfort, but not too close, about the same as a mattress is tied. After you have the pad and bed tied overcast the edges together and you will have a nice feather mattress almost as soft as a hair mattress.

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a stupefying poison. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—a little late though—Congress says "Put it on the label if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good!! Hereafter for this very reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

HE PLEADS NOT GUILTY.

This Sensational Murder Trial is Attracting General and Wide-Spread Attention

Probably no trial ever conducted in the Clinton county court has attracted such general and widespread interest as that of William Donley, charged with the murder of his nine-year-old niece, the first step in which was taken Monday afternoon when the grand jury found a true bill. This was not until after Judge Hall had adjourned court for the day, and as a consequence the work of selecting a jury to hear the evidence and render a verdict did not begin until Tuesday morning.

When the court room doors were opened at 9 o'clock Tuesday, there was such a crowd in waiting that within five minutes every seat, outside of the space reserved for the bar, was occupied. By the time court was opened at 9.30 there was not even standing room. A moment before the arrival of Judge Hall and the associate judges, Donley was brought in handcuffed to one of Sheriff Mussina's associates. He was neatly dressed in a suit of black, and showed not the least evidence of worry over the ordeal through which he is to pass. In fact, he looked much brighter than he did at the preliminary hearing held in the county jail soon after his arrest. When R. B. McCormick, Esq., one of his counsel, entered, Donley smiled, shook hands with the attorney and had every appearance of being well pleased with himself and in good humor. He occupied a seat at the table with his counsel, W. C. Kress and R. B. McCormick; at his side was his brother-in-law, William Casey, of Renovo, on whose wedding day the crime for which Donley is being tried, was committed. The case was taken up at once.

"What say you, guilty or not guilty," came the question. "Not guilty!" responded Donley, in a loud and clear voice that could be heard in all parts of the crowded court room. "How do you wish to be tried?" was next asked. Donley hesitated a moment apparently not understanding what answer was to be given and then said something that sounded like "by my country." The work of selecting a jury was at once begun and proceeded upon the same as in all murder trials. Each juryman called upon was closely questioned by counsel for both sides. District Attorney Hipple conducted the examination of the jurymen for the commonwealth and Attorney McCormick for the defendant.

Any belief that the defendant would present an insanity plea was dispelled by the mornings proceedings, and it is evident that Donley's attorney's rely on having sufficient evidence to secure an acquittal.

THE LOCAL OPTION QUESTION.

A Call Issued for a Public Meeting in the Court House.

At a meeting of citizens irrespective of party held in the Y. M. C. A., rooms on Monday Jan 20th, at 10 30 a. m. to take into consideration what action should be taken upon the local option question with reference to the approaching election for members of the Legislature, a committee of five was appointed to issue a call for a conference to be held in the Court House. The committee organized by the election of J. C. Meyer, President, and C. C. Shuey secretary, after which the following call was issued;

MY DEAR SIR:

The tidal wave of enthusiasm in the temperance reform is hitting Pennsylvania hard. We had almost enough votes in the last Legislature to force the issue out of Committee, and many leaders in the State who were against it then are now outspokenly in favor of advanced legislation along this line. We are facing a crisis. The iron is hot. We must strike—strike now, and strike hard. The liquor men stand solidly organized. We must meet an organized foe with an organized force. Centre County has the temperance sentiment, and if it can be crystalized we can send a man to Harrisburg to the next Legislature, who will truly represent that sentiment.

We do not wish to put an independent man in the field as a candidate if it can be avoided, but if we shall have the old parties nominate men who stand square on this question we must make our power felt before the primaries.

At a conference of men, held in Bellefonte, January 20th, 1908, a committee was appointed to call a meeting for conference, looking to an organization affiliating with the Anti Saloon League in this fight.

The Committee has fixed on Thursday, February 6th, as the date. The Court House as the place. The time 10 a. m. The conference will be held morning and afternoon, and the Mass Meeting in the evening. A representative of the State League will be present.

We rely upon you as one interested in this movement, to be present yourself, and to see that your community shall be largely represented. The more men the better. A big meeting, full of enthusiasm will be a long step in the commencement of this fight.

Trusting that you will be present at this meeting, we are

Yours Most Cordially,

J. C. MEYER,
F. W. CRIDER,
JARED HARPER,
F. POTTS GREEN,
C. C. SHUEY.

Mr. Benner has made a success from the smallest beginning in the merchantile business, and it is like him to begin manufacturing on a small scale and grow as conditions warrant. In this venture citizens of that vicinity wish him and his partner abundant success, and a repetition of his past experience in business.
